

SUMO GAME RULES

A sumo bout is called a Basho

Before a bout starts, the two participants should stand behind the white lines and face each other. In traditional sumo fashion some pre bout psyching out takes place in the form of staring down your opponent and knee slapping.

The aim of the basho is to either push, pull, trip or throw your opponent out of the circle on the mat, or force them onto their back.

At the end of the bout, flopping onto your fallen opponent 'splatting' is usual sumo etiquette and further entertains the laughing crowd.
